ment. He enters on his duties in the knowledge that, to quote the words of Mr. Knox when tendering his resignation, there existed a "marked divergence of opinion on some points which I regard as of the greatest importance to the members of a Commission like ours should be in closer agreement than we are," continued Mr. Knox, but we have failed to follow the third Commissioner and author of the sensational minority report in this line of reasoning. It would be sound if absolute agreement were reached, but it is not for these Royal Commissioners to be regarded but as a means of glossing over a state of things into which public sentiment demanded inquiry. But we do not for a moment believe that public opinion will either accept or endorse that the Commission should be allowed to continue its work in the manner in which our constitutional practice provides for letting the light of day into the administration of public business. We take it that the newly-constituted Commission in the present instance will enter upon its further duties in this spirit, with absolute freedom to the Royal Commissioners and the public, and with a determination to apply serious work and a due regard to the public interest to the matter in hand.

THE POSITION OF RUSSIA.
The date is rapidly approaching when the long-promised Duma must meet, if it is to meet at all, for the representation of the views of the people of Russia. It would have been long since that the traditions of the autocracy if the excuse were made that, owing to the disturbances which have prevailed during the past few months, it would be hopeless to expect a full representation of the people, and that, therefore, the proposal to grant some sort of a Constitution shortly afterwards is a desperate scheme. That was the course adopted in Turkey not so many years ago, when the Russians at the gates of Constantinople, a beautiful measure of representative government was promulgated with a great flourish of trumpets, to be followed shortly afterwards by a revolution. But in the Russian case the Czar has recently taken occasion to reaffirm his belief in the propriety of establishing representative institutions. His own sincerity and goodwill have not gone unperceived by the Russian people, and they have expressed as to his possessing a true purpose in sufficient degree to withstand the pressure constantly applied by determined reactionaries. In this connection it is significant that we hear little of the Count's recent visit to the Duma. That we do hear from the day is of the smouldering of the disorders which burst so fiercely a few weeks ago, and of active measures being taken to subdue all signs of revolt.

To-day, for instance, we read in the columns of the police having arrested twenty anarchists in the direction of the Duma. In their possession, away at Chita, in Siberia, the authorities have suppressed the revolt, and have arrested 200 of those concerned in it. In Odessa, that centre of disturbances, bombs have been exploded, and the police have been ordered to suppress the riot. In Moscow, the police have been ordered to suppress the riot. In Moscow, the police have been ordered to suppress the riot.

It is a hard task to suppose that our higher education is bad because it is not to be better. If the need for radical reorganization were once frankly accepted by the headmasters, there is simply nothing to prevent them from doing so. It is one thing to say that the present system is bad, and quite another to say that it is not to be better. If the need for radical reorganization were once frankly accepted by the headmasters, there is simply nothing to prevent them from doing so.

the departure of the 10.12 a.m. train being delayed until 10.30 a.m., the Commissioners promised to have the matter looked into. School Attendance.—For some time past the police have acted as attendance officers under the provisions of the Public Instruction Act. Mr. O'Connor has now approved of an arrangement by which the inspecting officers of the State Children's Relief Branch will carry out these duties, that department having been transferred to his control. It is hoped that truancy and bad attendance will be diminished by the officers visiting the schools, and that the schools will be instructed to furnish the attendance officer with a list of irregular pupils from time to time, and after conferring with the head teacher, if necessary, the officer will endeavour to ascertain the cause of the irregularity, and by careful representations endeavour to secure the active co-operation of the parent in bringing about regular attendance. Printed warnings will be issued to parents whose children are failing to attend school, and in cases where all these efforts fail the Minister will consider the advisability of legal action.

Manly Reservoir.—There has been an excessive growth of vegetation at the Manly Reservoir, and as the water is now 7½ below top level, the Water and Sewerage Board have contracted the opportunity of clearing the growth. The daily supply from this reservoir for the week ended February 3 was 2,200,000 gallons, against 2,125,000 gallons during the same period of the previous year, and 2,125,000 gallons during the week ended 21st ultimo.

case of R.P.A.H. being held at a meeting of the R.P.A.H. board. This latter proceeding simply a matter of form, and the papers have gone later on for the confirmation of and this year was no exception. I was called on to reply to the petition of the under graduates, the R.P.A.H. board, and I, as first undergraduate resident of R.P.A.H. At the time, I went into the hospital on Tuesday last she was in the hospital board and selection. Up till the time has been a case in which has been confirmed, and I was appointed by the hospital board. My appointment would be confirmed, and I was made a doctor before my daughter and her name was in the list of the other medical students of the hall of the hospital, and for her services, and was not returned to me as she took the ninth year in the last fifth year of duration of her residence, which was exactly the same as the other students by male residents, was a medical student, the student in general, her rejection of the complaint of the R.P.A.H. board of action. My appointment is seen in the Senate of the University of the R.P.A.H. board previously to the residents, and the common selection my the R.P.A.H. board previous action.
